

Abstract of the Disclosure

A subscriber loop interface circuit employs a high efficiency constant DC current source implemented using either a switched-mode current boost converter or a switched-mode voltage-to-current trans-converter. The constant DC current source provides higher efficiencies than that achievable using constant voltage sources while presenting a high impedance to voice band signals.

TI-31646-1001